something real to share.

What's a Dispatch?

A Dispatch is a short, honest piece about what's happening in your community — the mountains, the climate, a flood or landslide, or everyday community life. It's kept deliberately simple: there are no comments and no back-and-forth threads underneath it — just your voice, shared as-is.

What you'll need

- ✓ A short title — up to about 200 characters, roughly one sentence.
- ✓ Your write-up — up to about 6,000 characters (roughly 1,000 words), plain text.
- ✓ Your name, exactly as you'd like it to appear.
- ✓ Where you're writing from (optional) — e.g. "Langtang, Kathmandu".
- ✓ Your email — kept completely private, only used if a moderator needs to reach you.
- ✓ 1 to 3 topic tags describing what it's about.
- ✓ Your language — English or Nepali.

How it works

- 1 Write it up and fill in the short form with your title, text, name, and tags.
- 2 Submit it. You'll see a confirmation that it's been received.
- 3 A moderator reviews it before it goes live — this keeps what's published honest and grounded.
- 4 If approved, it's published on the site under your name (or the byline you chose).

Good to know: your email address is never shown publicly. There's currently no way to check status after submitting — once it's approved, you'll simply see it live on the site. Write about what you've actually seen or experienced; that's what makes a Dispatch worth reading.
